DEPARTMENT STORE

Great Expansion Sale

We Speak Honestly, We Speak Within Bounds When We Emphasize the Sale as "The Sale of Sales."

In it's economy it oversteps any sale ever held under this roof. Every stock in the store is profit-steipped, hundreds of them will never be exploited in print, but they are here, together will scores of other items that will be so emphasized.

It isn't the profit, it is not cost in many instances, that causes this great merchandise movement. The one great object is to reduce the stock to incorporating the Simon Department Store. It's a great chance, it's your chance, and your profit of wisdom in the taking advantage of it. We are going to crowd this store with satisfied buyers for Thirteen Days as it has never been crowded before, and we earnestly invite you to be one of them. You can make no mistake in buying at the Great Expansion and Incorporating Sale.

Tnis Sale Opens SATURDAY MAY 7

This Sale Closes SATURDAY, MAY 21

We are not afraid to advertise our prices, because we know they are bottom, but limited space prevents us from doing so here.

His subject, "Our Sweethearts, Wives and Mothers,," was well handled. He paid his respects in glowing colors to the new woman. He is a forcible speaker and carries his hearers with him through every avenue of thought. He abcunds in much wit and humor and is constantly drifting from the pathetic to the ridiculous. The church was well filled notwithstanding the inclement weather.

While the statue is completed, it has not been officially accepted by the Henry Clay Monument Commission but they are expected to hold a meeting this week and pass on the work. The fact that Sculptor Mulligan was directed by the commission to remove the scaffolding on which the figure was raised to is lofty height from around the monument is taken to mean that the commission is satisfied with the statue as it stands and will favorably act upon its acceptance when it meets to take final action. ## Callonby Loves His Wife

By KENNETT HARRIS

Mrs. Callonby had been pensively silent for nearly half an hour. Her husband, who was occupied with his papers, was beginning, sub-consciously, to realize that she had been long silent, when she spoke.

She was quite calm about it. There was no tremor in her voice. She spoke deliberately and in accents of conviction.

"James," she said, "you don't love me any more."

Callonby started. "Great Scott! How you scared me!" he exclaimed. 'You've been so still I'd forgotten you were in the room. What's that you were saving..'

"I said that you didn't love me," repeated Mrs. Callonby, in the same unemotional voice.

"My dear," said Callonby, "I adore

you. I'm simply crazy about you." "You make light of it," said his wife, "but I know perfectly well that you don't. I'm not going to make any fuss about it, but I've been thinking seriously, and I'm convinced that whatever love you had for me is dead."

"I'll put the paper right down and talk to you," said Callonby, contritely. Tell me what you have been doing to-day. What time did the girl go out? Have they got Miss Broton to promise to teach the kindergarten? Tell me, quick."

"My girlish beauty has faded," said Mrs. Callonby, sadly, diregarding her husband's jocular manner.

"You never notice what I have on or whether it's becoming, or anything.' "Nothing that you wear could be unbecoming," said Callonby. "The worst combination of color that was ever brought together would harmonize if you wore it. Haven't I told you so,

"Yes, if I ask you and pin you down you generally say something foolish," said Mrs. Callonby. "But you aren't really interested. James Callonby, you would notice another woman quick enough."

"Never!" declared Callonby, with emphasis. "All other women are to me as shadows. I have eyes only for

"And as soon as you come home you stick your nose into your paper and there's no getting anything out of you for the rest of the evening. I'm not complaining. I suppose it's quite natural and what a woman has to expect, but there was a time when One 50c bottle makes 12 gallons of medicine. you didn't want to read when you you were with me. You really seemed (to9aug); to enjoy my society."

"I should say so!" her husband declared. "But not nearly as much as I enjoy it now. "Especially if I don't talk."

"My own," said Callonby, "your voice is music to my ear. When I'm away from you I miss it more than you would suppose. Honest, Mag!"

"You don't love me, anyway." "Didn't I confess my love only a few Jill-"Perhaps it's one of those canal minutes ago Don't be unreasonable, mules kicking again." darling."

"Do you really?"

"Honest to Moses." "You're just saying it because I ask you," said Mrs. Callonby. "It's got so that I never know whether you're telling me the truth or not."

"I always tell the truth," Callonby said. "I haven't said a word this evening that wasn't as true as truth itself. Except once," he added. "I told you that you looked well in anything. In a sense that's true, but it did occur to me that your blue evening frock was getting a little tacky the other night. I think that perhaps you'd better get a new one. But, my dear, please don't be harder on me than you can help."

Mrs. Callonby clasped her hands. "Do you mean it, Jim?" she cried, ecstaticly. "And a hat to go with it?" Callonby's face fell a little. "Well,

I suppose so," he said. His wife threw her arms around his neck and kissed him. "You're the dearest, kindest, sweetest thing in all the world," she said. "James, I will take everything back that I said."

"Good!" said Callonby. "Now, are you going to let me read my paper?"

Fences of Ivory.

"Ivory is cheaper to-day than it one yellowback than all three. ever was. More ivory is being imported than ever. It isn't true that we are in danger of exhausting our supply."

The speaker, an ivory dealer, patted a tusk as big as a girl of 14. "This tusk," he said, "is from an ivory palisade about an African king's palace. In the interior of Africa there are innumerable kings and chiefs whose palisades are of ivory. For consider—since the world began there have been tusks and these tusks for centuries have been preserved by native potentates. It will be long enough before we exhaust that supply.

"The price of ivory? Well, I'll give you $4 a pound for the best tusk, suitable for billiard balls. That is able to provide for 1,000,000 population, as against 79,000 now there, is there than that of the abundance of the supply?"

The statement that Iceland will be able to provide for 1,000,000 population, as against 79,000 now there, is interesting enough, but there is no danger of a rush of emigrants.

for the coming crop were sent from headquarters to the Board of Control, with instructions to employ canvassers to secure the largest possible acreage, but thus far not a man has been put in but thus far not a man has been put in the field, nor a single contract signed.

The attitude of the Shelby board, as well as of the individual growers, who have hitherto been loyal to the Burley Tobacco Society, is that they are tired of pulling the chestnuts out of the fire for the benefit of those outside the pool. A tremendous crop was grown in Shebly county last year. Practically all the independent tobacco has been marketed at big prices, but wastly more importance in the long run is the internal cleanliness.
